

Lo-Fi Prototype Review

Claude, Heather Janier

- another password to remember would be annoying to have
- Liked the ability to use google or fb to log in with
- Overall website was bit bland
- Could it display more results when searching, seems kind of slow
- Does the owner get to see any more info? It is pretty empty

Dani Janier

- Branding is bland or nonexistent
- Having a list to show all of your owned businesses seems like dated design
- Clearly defined use for the website. Not confused on that

Don Hewitt, Arlene Syrota

- Don is quite tech literate so he liked the ability to have a variety of log in choices
- Multiple tabs for the owner view seemed counterintuitive. Didn't like obfuscating information for the owner
- Possible current day view for calendar? Seeing the whole month seems like a lot of info that isn't needed
- Clean design was nice

1.0 Website Design, coded

Arlene Syrota

- Arlene had troubles with the website design, font size too small, background video slightly distracting
 - Maybe slow down video? Make it less of the focus?
- Navigating was fast, snappy
- What if we don't have facebook? What happened to google login?
- Had a difficult time finding the nav buttons

Don Hewitt

- Map was a nice touch on the login page, like being able to see where businesses were
- Looks kinda funky on phone sized screens
- Maybe the business cards could appear on home screen
